The world faces extinction.

Dragons—ravenous beasts of immense elemental power—have risen from their millennium-long slumber to devour the world's magic. Their rise threatens to exterminate all life on the planet…as they have done countless times.

Azalea, a daughter of the Sylva, born of a giant, sentient tree, awakens into this world at war. She emerges fully grown from her seedpod with the afterimages of her destiny echoing across her mind.

But following a predestined course isn't something Azalea is interested in. Straying from her intended path, Azalea meets Joseph, an enigmatic human ranger with a predestined fate of his own.

Together, will the pair be able to survive the onslaught of the dragons?

Benjamin Fletcher has always been a fan of science fiction and fantasy adventures, enthralled not only by the mainstream series of his childhood but also by the fantastical worlds brought to life by video game companies through art and storytelling.

Benjamin's writing is a culmination of his love for fantasy, combined with his desire to see more romance stories that explore a complicated yet healthy relationship dynamic between their main characters and what happens after "happily ever after."
